Royal College of Occupational Therapists
The professional body for occupational therapy staff
(The Royal College of Occupational Therapists is the trading name and a subsidiary of the British Association of Occupational Therapists)

The Royal College of Occupational Therapists is a registered charity in England and Wales (No. 275119) and in Scotland (No. SCO39573) and a company registered in England (No. 1347374)
The Royal College’s Library and Information service offers RCOT members access to a specialist collection of current and historical occupational therapy publications; including 7000 individual publications, over 120 occupational therapy related journals and key ebooks and ejournals. Whether members visit the library at the RCOT’s headquarters or access publications via the Royal College’s website – these resources provide knowledge to support practice, education, research and CPD.

Informing student education
The library and information service supports student members:

- Helps you research material for assignments through the online library catalogue and key occupational therapy and health-related databases onsite
- Gives you online access to its specialist collection of ejournals and ebooks available 24/7 at university, home and on placement
- Provides a postgraduate thesis loan service
- Provides an ideal study environment which combines immediate access to core occupational therapy literature, the support of experienced information officers on hand to advise on research strategies, PCs, free Wi-Fi and a mixture of quiet study and group meeting spaces suited to your study needs

Supporting evidence-based practice
The library and information service can help you find the evidence base for your work:

- Enables you to increase your knowledge of all aspects of occupational therapy practice and research through access to its specialist collection of print and online resources including key occupational therapy ejournals and ebooks
- Provides you with a starting point to investigate subjects of current interest to occupational therapists through its Hot Topics and literature searches for members’ published on the Royal College’s website

Supporting your CPD
Developing research skills is a key competency for occupational therapists. The library and Information services can support you to develop these skills through:

- Providing practical advice on preparing and carrying out your own literature searches
- Offering library tours and presentations on library services and resources as part of workshops and conferences held at the Royal College’s HQ.

As a member of RCOT you can:

- Access a tailored collection of occupational therapy ejournals, ebooks and etheses on line 24/7
- Search the library catalogue for publications and literature on your subject area
- Obtain photocopies of print journals and book extracts held at the Royal College’s library
- Obtain articles from journals held at the British Library
- Borrow postgraduate theses and selected Royal College publications
- Come into the library to carry out research on key online databases or make use of the quiet space for private study. Bring your own laptop or use the library PCs (free wifi available).

Helping to improve your service delivery
The library and information service can help you by researching evidence to improve and develop your services:

- The library team undertakes free literature searches for occupational therapy practitioners.
- Library staff can search for key literature to assist you with problem-solving or decision-making in your work.

The library is open 9–5 Monday to Friday and there is always a member of the team available to answer your queries whether by telephone, email or in person

Please remember to bring your RCOT membership card with you when you visit the library
